

CLINICAL TRIALS DAY 2018

Join us in celebrating Clinical Trials Day on May 20, 2018 by raising clinical trial awareness and honoring clinical research professionals across the globe. In honor of this day, we are recognizing SOCRA members' contributions to public health, medical advancement and improved health outcomes.

JOIN US

Nominate a SOCRA member to be recognized for their outstanding work and contributions to clinical research! We will feature several submissions leading up to Clinical Trials Day and choose a winner to be featured in the next issue of the SOCRA Source, our quarterly journal!

Eligibility/Requirements: Nominees must be SOCRA members. Please include the following information in your email submission to office@socra.org:

- Nominator Information:
Name, Title, Organization
- Nominee Information:
Name, Title, Organization, Email
- Reason for Nomination Please provide a short blurb (250 words or less) on why you have nominated this person to be featured in honor of Clinical Trials Day! Feel free to attach photos, publications, or other materials to illustrate their outstanding work and contributions to the field!

A BIT OF HISTORY

International Clinical Trials Day is held on May 20th each year. On this day, we commemorate that James Lind began the first clinical trial in 1747 on board the HMS Salisbury to understand the causes, prevention, and treatment of scurvy.

OUR MISSION

- To promote quality clinical research to protect the welfare of research participants and improve global health
- To establish educational programming and provide continuing education for Clinical Research Professionals
- To establish an internationally recognized certification program for Clinical Research Professionals (CCRP[®])
- To foster the professional development and peer recognition of Clinical Research Professionals
- To be the global leader for clinical research professional development